

ASSISTED LIVING AND NURSING HOMES

Assisted Living facilities provide care for persons needing assistance with activities of daily living (ADLs). There are instrumental ADLs and daily activity ADLs which are used to assess what level of care and how much assistance is needed. There is no insurance coverage for Assisted Living, except long term care insurance nursing home days which can be converted. Nursing homes provide custodial care, skilled nursing care, and rehabilitation care. Each of these levels of care have specific definitions that determine cost and insurance coverage. Medicare has very limited coverage of rehabilitation and skilled nursing care.
